MICHELLE FINE

in conversation with

LIMARYS CARABALLO & WENDY LUTTRELL

In this book salon, MICHELLE FINE, LIMARYS CARABALLO, and WENDY LUTTRELL will reflect on the epistemological, ethical, theoretical, methodological and sometimes hilarious commitments and "choques" (thank you, Gloria Anzaldua) of inquiry conducted with young people navigating precarious lives, at the margin, with critical wisdom and radical wit. Together, they hope to open a conversation about the responsibilities of scholars in a public university, situated in one of the most unequal and racially stratified cities in the nation, as these scholars take up research, policy work and activism to theorize, engage in feminist collaborations for racial and queer justice with young people, bear witness, accompany movements for justice, and provoke a radical imagination for what else is possible.
